W: Abigail Waters. Now do I get to go? At my high school, we were lucky enough to have an Elder In Residence. Which means that we had an amazing First Nations man at our school there to give us advice and be our pal and just hang out with us. And whenever I would go him, and telling him about hateful things I heard about in the hallways, he would just say ‘hanuka matata baby’. So my favorite thing about Canada is my Elder In Residence and for his patience and for his love for people who spread hate even. That's not a sentence. What’s a good word for that?

I: I can edit this out.

W: Yeah, yeah, I figured. What's like a word for someone who likes to believe even though they're shitty? Crappy.

I: Well, I would say he has tolerance.

O: I was going to say tolerance.

W: Perfect. My favorite thing about Canada is my Elder In Residence and his tolerance for others.
