

A: My name is Contessa Abbott and I guess I knew the library and I'm a Canadian. My family is mixed with indigenous blood and we've a long history of both settlers and indigenous people. My great-grandparents were medicine women and healers, as well as hunters and farmers here. And they, I guess they took in my other side of my family and, which were filled with settlers and trappers and I guess frontiers. And they traveled from one end of the, Canada to another. Some of my ancestors I guess were pushed over here, just all through different reasons and they've managed to really come together and work out and find peace between both sides. And Canada for me is like probably the best place in the world to live because of that. I think we've got a lot of cultural opportunities amongst each other. And I want to see the next 150 years be more people bridging those gaps and building on, you know being peaceful and accepting one another and working together. So, I don't know what else to say.

I: That was awesome.
