S: Carol Sylvest. I'm with the Mid-Island Vintage Tractor and Equipment Club. This year, being as it was 150th centenary, the VIEX asked us to put on a display, a step back in time for them. We had a little, in the little red barn around the corner we had a few years ago, we had a similar display. So they thought 'gee, maybe we should ask them to do it again'. This used to be a haunted house. It got emptied out, so they told us we can have 60 feet of it. So we built so much. General store, and we made a parlor, a dining room, a kitchen, laundry room, what else? A bedroom, and a ladies room. So it started out very small and we sort of thought to ourselves 'well, I guess we gotta build something here'. Paint the walls, make some shelves, find some fencing. We found the fencing, got it all cleaned and painted, and put it up and people started to trickle in their goods. And you can see that we don't really have a huge membership, but we put together this amazing show. I mean look at all the stuff. And this is all coming from people's homes. It's not something that we've, you know have piled up anywhere. It's been piled up at people's homes. And they brought it out. And it's, some of it's great. I mean there's an old typewriter down there that Chap used in the Second World War. He was a war correspondent. You could hardly pick the thing up, it's so heavy, so I guess his baggage bill was up pretty big. But there are old dresses. We've got the depression glasses, the purple glass that was made before 1937. We've got lots of china. I mean the table over there is, you know everything in here is basically 1950 and older. So you've got everybody's saws that their own fathers and grandfathers used. Old antique cash registers. That's a school desk, with a slate and you can pull it up. That gets turned, so it's got all the different mathematical things. On the other side's a map. We've got all the horse collars, hames, bits, whatever. A Radio Flyer. They're celebrating their 100th year anniversary this year. There's a harness on the front of it. Belonged to his dog. They'd harness up the dog and he'd pull them along in his red Flyer. What else can I tell you about? We got your butter churn out there. I mean there you go. You get to flip that back and forth, making your butter. We've got another butter. Oh, it's up in the kitchen. But the cream separator there. We got a great big tall cream separator, so I guess each era gets another one. So that was big and heavy, so let's make it portable. There's a portable radio over there that take 2 men and a boy to carry it, but it was portable. And what else can I say? I'm running out. Maybe Peg can answer more.
